The collection, called ‘Collection I,’ is Mollen’s first venture into rugs. The new collection is made up of five unique designs in eight total variations– with bold graphics and geometric repetitions throughout the designs.

“I’ve always been a fan of Elizabeth’s designs and Stone Textile Studio, so I jumped at the opportunity to be able to collaborate and work with her stunning graphics bringing them into the rug space,” said Kyra Schulhof, founder and creative director of Fayette Studio. “We are thrilled with how this collection turned out and can’t wait to see how our network of interior designers customize Elizabeth’s designs and incorporate them into their projects.”

Mollen said Schulhof was very helpful in guiding her through the process of working with rugs.

“Seeing these patterns that I’ve had in my portfolio for so long in a completely new way really brought such a new life to them,” Mollen said.
